The large depot of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, at Hoboker was completely destroyed by fire early on Saturday morning. The fire was first discovered in that portion of the extensive building nearest the ferry house, but is not known how it was communicated. The ferry house was also considerably damaged, but the ferry boats were uninjured. Prssengers are now compelled to walk some two blocks to reach the ferry, but otherwise the burning of the depot has not interfered with travel upon the road.
